“ My time spent with Barb were the occasional breakfasts at Suki’s, and then Havens Main Street Diner. I would often visit a friend from Towanda and would have breakfast there. We hit it off right from the start because we both came from Brooklyn. It had less to do with growing up in the same area, but more to do with understanding the magic that a certain area has. For instance... Even with our 20-year age difference, our descriptions of the beautiful multi-story, marble, walnut, and brass Art Deco elevator bank at Abraham & Strauss on downtown Fulton Street were almost identical, right down to the sensational revolving Christmas tree that was suspended from the ceiling.

The diner table was often noisy and made it difficult for me to hear especially before I got my hearing aids. Barb would signal me to wait one minute and would then turn her head and yell over her shoulder, “HEY, KEEP IT DOWN... can’t you see we’re trying to have a conversation?”

Her wit, humor, and sass... I have no doubt she’s that new star I spotted twinkling in the night sky the other night.

Breakfast will not be the same. Miss ya Barb!... as will my hearing aids.
