“ Hello Mary-Jo and family. I met you briefly today at the calling hours but wanted to write down my last memory of Chuck for you to read rather than taking up your time today and having a stranger cry all over you :)

I was friends with Chuck through the comic shop. We met there 15 years or more ago and became fast friends. He was one of the funniest people I knew and we would always crack each other up. Back then Wednesday nights were always the night that we'd go out as a group and find something fun to do. Over the years I saw less and less of Chuck it seemed and while I knew he had health problems, I didn't know the full extent of them because he didn't like to talk about it.

The last time I saw Chuck was a few months ago. I ran into him at the comic shop and hadn't seen him in quite a while at that point. So I ended up staying because he was there and we hung out and had dinner. I had mentioned to him that I was a little nervous about a growth that had recently been found on my thyroid and told him that the recent biopsy had come back inconclusive as to whether or not it was cancer and that I was waiting on the results from a bigger DNA test. He was very concerned about it and even tried referring me to his own doctor so that I could be seen sooner. Talking about how he'd try to give me his appointment that he had scheduled. I told him it wasn't necessary and that even if it was cancer, I knew with the thyroid it was much easier to manage than most. Didn't matter to Chuck. He knew when my upcoming appointments were and would message me the day of and ask for updates. All the while he wouldn't tell me what was going on with him.

The day I found out I was okay, I texted him to let him know and that's the last I heard from him. He didn't need or want to tell me what was going on with him because he was selfless, caring, and brave. I'm sure you know all that but I wanted to tell you again and let you know what he meant to me and all his friends.
