“ I am so sorry for the loss of your mother, Shirley. Shirley and I were friends while working at Robert Packer Hospital. We would have lunch together every day. And, of course, I knew all her family. Shirley was so pretty, she looked like Liz Taylor! When I went to visit her in the nursing home, I told her that. I kept talking to her, not sure if she knew me or what I was saying, but when I left I told her I would come back to visit again, but I did not get there and feel badly about that. When I left that day, I said to her, love you, and unbelievably, she said, love you too. I could not believe it because she predominantly just starred while I talked to her about anything that I could think of that she might remember. In any event, I am so glad I went and truly sorry for the family to lose a beautiful mother. She was a great baker too!!
