“ I can remember when we were young teenagers, Tim had an older dirt bike and I had a newer race bike with a worked motor. We would ride around the “Wysox Jumps” and I would always be faster. I always thought I was the “better and faster” rider. Lol.... Well one day we decided to switch bikes and Tim beat the crap out of me. So then my excuse was that his bike sucked. Lol... so then we got the bright idea of doing timed laps with my race bike to see who (in fairness) was actually the faster and better rider. Same exact bike so no excuses!! So I think I went first and clocked a good time on my bike. Then Tim got on my bike and he clocked a better time. I thought “no way he beat me” haha.. I thought maybe the kid clocking the time (probably an old timex watch) was not hitting the buttons correctly. So we did it over, but had the same results, so then we did it again and again and again....if I remember correctly I believe I did match his time once. So I’ll never forget that day that Tim kicked my ass with my race bike!! Fair and square! We had such a blast. Wish I could turn the clock back to those days.

Tim Ackley was one of the nicest guys you would ever meet. It was a pleasure being a friend of his when we were younger.
